Summary

This is the last volume in the series The Legacy of Antiquity, where the author explains the classical origin of well-known expressions used by famous Greek and Roman leaders, philosophers etc., such as "the die has been cast," "money does not stink," or "everything flows." Other words and expressions, such as "Olympics," "Spartan upbringing," originate from cultural traditions and customs of the Antiquity. Phrases related to historical events or figures constitute still another category, e.g. "Pyrrhic victory." Each explanation follows a similar pattern: the author presents first historical origins of the expression, and then its contemporary usage. The first phrase is "Alpha and Omega." The author discusses letters of the Greek alphabet and how it was taught in Antiquity according to Quintilian. The meaning and modern usage of each entry is illustrated in a dramatized scene with three characters, young siblings, Krzyś, Stefanek and Elka. This innovative manner of closing the gap between the far away Antiquity and our times seems particularly effective.

Analysis

The book includes famous phrases, e.g. "everything flows," "the die has been cast," "veni, vidi, vici," "history is the teacher of life," "bread and games," "You have conquered, o Galilean"; expressions related to ancient history, e.g. "Draconian laws," "to deliver a philippic"; origins of words, e.g. tyrant, patron, patronage; stereotyped expressions e.g. "the eighth wonder of the world," "rich as Croesus." The author explains in a clear way where such expressions come from and what they mean, often quoting ancient historians and famous scholars. The dramatized scenes demonstrate how the classical phrases function in modern language.
