Additional information

Summary

Heracles, the son of a mortal woman and the god, Zeus, was hated by Hera. She inflicted him with madness and he committed a terrible crime. As penance, he served King Eurystheus and was set twelve difficult and dangerous labours to perform.

In this book about Hercules there are 15 chapters that correspond to his birth, the Twelve Labours, and the end of his life. The narration is very story-like as opposed to having a didactic or historical/educational bend, almost matter-of-fact, and without any bias towards Hercules' side of the story. It is told in a way so as not to make Hercules seem egoistic, or the gods as malevolent beings, allowing the reader to draw their own opinion about the myth and the characters involved.

There are black and white woodcuts every few pages throughout the book, lending an ancient feel to the story although they are not influenced by classical Greek art.
